THE LOTUSLAND EFFECT
How Gardens Heal Us

COLLECTIONS NEWS
A Passion for Bromeliads
LETTER FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Lotusland Members and Friends,

“A garden is a grand teacher. It teaches patience and careful watchfulness. It teaches industry and thrift; above all it teaches entire trust.” —Gertrude Jekyll, British horticulturalist

For the last six months the pandemic has driven us to hunker down in our homes, and for many of us, this includes more time spent in our gardens. My family planted a new garden in April, and its fruitful offerings of red and yellow vine ripe tomatoes were a highlight of many of our summer meals.

Gardens provide satisfaction, beauty, therapy, and a sense of command in a world that is largely out of our control. Despite its destruction, COVID has had a benefit of teaching us to treasure our homes, gardens and natural landscapes. Public gardens offer immense benefits by stimulating and soothing with their synthesis of scenery and science. During this time of indoor risk, public and private gardens have become a sanctuary.

As we navigate exposure during the COVID pandemic, we can trust in the embrace of the natural world. The safety and serenity of fresh air, predictability of seasons, fail proof cycles of the moon, comfort of a cool breeze, and the optimism of a sunny and clear day, are vital to our well-being.

During these uncertain times, Lotusland — and its 37 most pristine acres of cultivated gardens and raw native lands — reminds us that we may place our trust in nature.

Lotusland, as an organization, is carefully minding our pennies and our people, and conserving and balancing our resources to make certain we are able to remain here for your inspiration and enjoyment. Our collective prudence and patience will see us through these difficult times. While individual guest visitation remains in high demand, our ability to operate has been severely impacted by the ramifications of COVID-19 and we have experienced major shortfalls in group ticket sales, and limited fundraising events.

Please keep supporting Lotusland with your membership and donations, and by doing so ensure that students, members and guests can continue to enjoy the embrace of a biological boost that makes us feel good and grounded. We are appreciative of your loyal support and shared belief in the many benefits of a garden.

As Always,

Rebecca Anderson
Executive Director

MISSION

We preserve and enhance the unique, historic estate of Madame Ganna Walska, care for and improve its collections, and develop its conservation and horticulture programs, so they educate us, inspire us, and advance our understanding and appreciation of the importance of plants in our lives and in the life of the planet.
LOTUSLAND: HAPPY HOUR HAPPENINGS
Meet Our New Executive Director

Zoom Meeting on October 15 at 5:00 PM

Grab a glass and join us at 5:00 PM on Thursday, October 15 for a Lotusland Zoom Happy Hour to meet and toast Rebecca and discuss the Garden’s past, present and future.

“I am honored to work with a committed board and an outstanding staff and volunteers to protect and preserve this historic garden and to collectively ensure a bright, healthy and sustainable future for Lotusland and its collections.” — Rebecca Anderson

LOTUSLAND HAS A SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT FEEL THESE DAYS. The sense of oasis is acutely palpable as people stroll serenely down the main drive, pause to peer out across the Japanese Garden pond, or watch the bees buzz in the Insectary. Donning masks and stopping for hand sanitizer, signs of the times, visitors nonetheless find a world that takes them outside of their own lives as they experience the otherworldly gardens of Ganna. In some ways, Lotusland's gardens are timeless, seemingly unchanged by the chaos of the year that has transpired outside of the surrounding pink walls. In other ways, the enduring presence of the gardens has new significance against the backdrop of the uncertain times in which we are living.

In addition to a global pandemic, the world is facing a mental health crisis. According to a survey administered by the US Census Bureau in response to COVID-19, over one-third of Americans (36%) are experiencing symptoms of clinical anxiety and/or depression. That number is astoundingly high among 18-29 year olds at nearly half (46.8%). For most, February feels a lifetime ago; a time when children went to school on packed buses and played on playgrounds, adults went into busy workplaces and enjoyed local establishments on the weekends; we hugged our loved ones and traveled to exotic places. Then the pandemic sent us into quarantine. It also sent many of us into a prolonged fight-or-flight mode. Fight-or-flight is the body's response to a perceived threat. Evolutionarily, it is essential for our survival, but often proves to be maladaptive in our modern world, and is associated with anxiety disorders, post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), and a suite of other mental and physical ailments. Our fight-or-flight modes are in overdrive. We have a remedy right here in our own backyard.
During this time in history, many have found solace in the gardens of their lives. In fact, gardens have seen a boon in interest since the Pandemic hit. A major seed seller in the US, Burpee Seeds, reported selling more seeds in March 2020 than any other time in their 144 year history. Seeds and gardening materials have flown off the shelves. While food anxiety certainly has played a role, gardens have also provided a space now, bringing a calm mindfulness to our lives. This is just the tip of the iceberg. Linda Buzzell, a local therapist and author of the book Ecotherapy: Healing with Nature in Mind shared with us, “There is now an amazing amount of good scientific research supporting the effectiveness of nature connection therapies like horticultural therapy, walks outdoors and deep connection with animals, gardens and wild places.

Science shows that gardens can take us out of fight-or-flight and into rest-and-digest mode.

for people to find refuge, intimacy with nature, and solace amidst the turmoil. Science is just catching up to what many of us have known intuitively: gardens are good for us.

Science shows that gardens can take us out of fight-or-flight and into rest-and-digest mode. This latter mode is where mental and physical healing occurs. Nature has been proven to provide feelings of physical wellbeing and improve our immune functioning. Nature helps with anxiety, PTSD, and depression. One mechanism is the feeling of awe we get in nature, which is characterized by a sense of the vastness and complexity of the world around us. This experience reduces the felt size of our problems. Nature also helps to restore our attention to the here and now, bringing a calm mindfulness to our lives. This is just the tip of the iceberg. Linda Buzzell, a local therapist and author of the book Ecotherapy: Healing with Nature in Mind shared with us, “There is now an amazing amount of good scientific research supporting the effectiveness of nature connection therapies like horticultural therapy, walks outdoors and deep connection with animals, gardens and wild places.

I haven’t discovered even one study saying that contact with some aspect of the rest of nature doesn’t improve our wellbeing!” Dr. Buzzell also shared ways we can experience these benefits, “Almost any type of nature-contact has been shown to be healing - even pictures of landscapes on walls - but of course immersing ourselves in beautiful gardens, lovely parks, lush hiking trails or being around water will be especially healing. Lotusland offers all of these benefits and more.”

While Ganna Walska may not have known the science behind it, she felt the healing power of her gardens. Ganna lived a packed life chasing many pursuits before coming to Santa Barbara and devoting the last 43 years of her life to the creation of Lotusland. The lure of the gardens kept her here. In a letter to a friend in 1950, she shared, “I work in the garden which is the only thing that rests me- and a rest I certainly needed and very badly.” We can feel connected to Ganna in knowing that she found the same kind of solace in her gardens that many of us continue to find in Lotusland.

Gardens are a place where nature and culture intersect, and where humans can foster a relationship with nature. This relationship is something we crave as part of our evolutionary heritage dating back to our time as hunters and foragers. Nature is not just a luxury, but is essential for our wellbeing. On April 24, 2020, the County of Santa Barbara declared places for outdoor recreation, including botanic gardens, on the list of essential businesses, allowing Lotusland to reopen and resume fulfilling its mission to educate, inspire, and advance our appreciation of the importance of plants in our lives. Gardens and other green spaces are vital support for tackling the mental health crisis and improving public health. We are honored to be able to offer Lotusland as a refuge for those seeking calm and solace in their lives during these times and moving forward.
Horticultural Happenings

REPLACING THE IRREPLACEABLE, PART 2

GARDENS ARE DYNAMIC AND EVER CHANGING. From seedling to senescence, plants have a limit to how long they live – some complete their entire life cycle in less than one year and others over the course of millennia. We do our best at Lotusland to keep the plant collections alive and thriving but like everything, eventually a plant's health declines.

This was the case with one of the most iconic plants at Lotusland. An old, original weeping Euphorbia ingens recently had to be removed in front of the main house because of declining health. It was part of the 1942 landscape transformation that Madame Ganna Walska created together with acclaimed landscape architect Lockwood de Forest. The plant had become a hazard, shedding a large limb with additional dead branches and a large cavity entirely through the trunk. We were able to save a few cuttings of the plant to cultivate for the future.

With a grant from the Garden Club of Santa Barbara we have transplanted a large weeping E. ingens from close by on the main drive to fill the vacant spot and restore the original planting. We worked with Steve Hanson Landscaping to prepare the plant for the move and Doug Coale of Mesa Tree Company to move the replacement plant using a crane. Much care was taken to prepare and support the plant for transport. This plant is tough yet delicate at the same time so a wooden box and crate were built to encase the plant’s root ball. Crossing boards and lashings were used wherever needed to secure as many limbs as possible to keep the brittle arms from breaking. The planting bed was prepared by Lotusland’s grounds staff. Golden barrel cacti, rocks, lava mulch and old roots were removed and even some of the original 1942 obsidian mulch used by Lockwood de Forest was found. The soil was amended with a sandy soil mix and sifted compost.

Succulents such as E. ingens are known to be good at recovering from transplant, having plenty of stored energy to regenerate roots so it will be no time until this plant is re-established and thriving. — Paul Mills

LOTUSLAND’S ARCHIVES

Ganna Walska: Philanthropist

By Rose Thomas, Lotusland Research Associate

LITTLE HAS BEEN PRINTED ABOUT Madame Ganna Walska’s benevolence. She believed that broadcasting an altruistic act negated the intention of the gift. Numerous organizations and individuals were touched by her generosity. From humanitarian to cultural, Ganna Walska shared her largesse throughout her lifetime.

Many of her early concert and stage performances were done for charitable causes and relief organizations during World War I. She was known to loan out her Théâtre de Champs Élysées for fundraising events and in 1969 gave the theatre to the French government for a token sum.

Although she never had children, she had a great fondness for them. A photo shows her sitting on the floor, surrounded by the toys and dolls she collected from friends and acquaintances. On Christmas day, 1929, she personally distributed them to the children of Paris policemen.

Gladly stepping out of the limelight after her move to Montecito, she devoted herself to creating the gardens of Lotusland while continuing to contribute to causes nationally and abroad. She provided continual financial support to the Music Academy of the West, and contributed to the Lobero Theater, Santa Barbara Symphony, Santa Barbara Zoo, Humane Society, Santa Barbara Beautiful, St. Francis Hospital, and Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church.

Ganna Walska felt a strong responsibility to Lotusland and the garden staff. Evidence of her kindness is recorded in a 1997 letter to Smithsonian magazine from a retired gardener. He wrote:

I read the article on Lotusland with great interest, as I worked for the Madame before her death… I rarely see anything written about her kindness, sense of humor and whimsey, love and respect for life and things alive, or her overwhelming generosity.

She so often would come to where I was working on one of her ‘special’ projects, ask how my mother was, and slip a one-hundred dollar bill into my pocket, ‘because things were so expensive at the market,’ as she saw, and she wanted to be sure we had a little extra for food…

Ganna Walska’s kindness and the help she gave to so many needs to be remembered and honored.
Curator’s note: Valued volunteers Bob and Ginny Guess have been working with curatorial staff to document the bromeliad collection for a decade and a half.

In 1960, Madame Ganna Walska introduced bromeliads to Lotusland. Intrigued by their dramatic forms and colors, flamboyant blooms, and habit of thriving on trees as well as in the soil, she commissioned Fritz Kubisch to surround her living quarters in the Pavilion with bromeliads. Kubisch, owner of a landscape business specializing in tropical plants and a collector who traveled frequently to Mexico, provided her with a wide selection of plants that soon flourished. This marked the beginning of the Upper Bromeliad Garden. In 1968, when she hired Bill Paylen to renovate several gardens, he moved excess plants across the Great Lawn to what became the Lower Bromeliad Garden, using the Rooster Grotto as a pivotal feature. Starting in 1971, Charles Glass enhanced this section with additional bromeliads collected in Mexico.

In 2004, when Virginia Hayes, then Curator of Living Collections, was looking for a speaker to introduce bromeliads to new docents, she turned to us. We had spent decades living in Chiapas, Mexico, studying the bromeliads of that state, and published over twenty articles on Bromeliaceae in the Journal of the Bromeliad Society. We were reluctant at first, aware that Lotusland had a much broader range of plants than Chiapas. Virginia finally convinced us to participate in the docent class of January 2005. In preparation, we started to study and document the bromeliads at Lotusland. What began as a one-time introduction for docents has endured for fifteen years with Ginny doing the presentations using Bob’s photographs. We continue to devote a morning each week to record the ever-changing exotic blooms that adorn these gardens and captivate visitors.

In 2011, Mike Furner, a member of the staff for over forty years and who worked alongside Paylen and Glass, was assigned to care for the Bromeliad Gardens. His passion and knowledge of these plants, enhanced by his aesthetic landscape talents, blended well with our enthusiasm. Two years ago, Anna Bower, Assistant Curator, assumed the daunting task of mapping and finalizing an inventory of all bromeliads. This now includes well over three hundred taxa, some of which could be offsets of original plants enjoyed by Madame. The Upper and Lower Bromeliad Gardens, the results of this teamwork and maintenance by Mike and his hardworking volunteers, are no longer just a passage to other parts of Lotusland, but rather a destination unto themselves. They stand as an enduring tribute to Madame’s foresight and fascination with Bromeliaceae.

USA TODAY READERS’ CHOICE AWARDS
Lotusland Ranks 6 of the 10 Best Botanical Gardens in the Country

USA TODAY 10 Best Readers’ Choice Awards included Lotusland as one of Best Botanical Gardens in the Country. Abby Meyer, executive director of the US branch of Botanic Gardens Conservation International nominated Lotusland for the contest stating, “for your important contributions to plant collections, conservation, and community building you do in the Santa Barbara area, as well as across the nation and world. I admire the great work you and your team are doing.” Lotusland is proud and honored to be part of this esteemed list of organizations.

Thank you to our Members and devoted supporters who voted for Lotusland’s stature as the top botanic garden in the United States.

A DEFINING NEW EDUCATIONAL EXPERIENCE LAUNCHED DURING THE PANDEMIC

Junior Botanist Program

BETWEEN MARCH AND MAY 2020, the pandemic caused the cancellation of Lotusland field trips for nearly 1,000 fourth grade students around the county and eliminated group field trips for the 2020-2021 school year. In response, Lotusland is pleased to present our Junior Botanist Program, a new educational experience that gives students and their families the opportunity to enjoy an informative visit to Lotusland free of charge. In keeping with a tradition of more than two decades of fourth grade education, this new program pivot provides a way for students to experience the open-air laboratory of Lotusland in our socially distanced era, and allows Lotusland to share our passion for life science education.

Using a newly developed activity guide, fourth grade students learn about the fascinating world of plant adaptations as they lead their family through the gardens on a quest to become a Junior Botanists. Guided by an illustrated character Begonia the Botanist, students visit plants from all around the world as they try to help Begonia answer the question “Why are there so many kinds of plants in the world?” This family-friendly program gives everyone the chance to enjoy time together away from screens, immersed in the natural beauty of Lotusland.

The program is open to currently enrolled fourth grade students in the County only and is offered free of charge on select days during the school year. For more information contact Gillian Conner, Junior Botanist Program Coordinator, at gconner@lotusland.org, 805.969.3767, ext. 119.

CELEBRATING LORI MESCHLER

Junior Botanists and their families will explore the garden because of this dedicated docent and ambassador

Lori Meschler’s activities at Lotusland are amazingly diverse and very much appreciated. You might see her working in the garden alongside members of Lotusland’s grounds staff, sharing her abundant horticultural knowledge with a group of adults on a garden tour, leading fourth graders as part of our Fourth Grade Outreach Program, and helping in nearly every aspect of Lotusland.

An exciting and generous tribute gift has been made by her dear friend Mark Livanec and his business, El Camino Ventures, in honor of Lori Meschler, to launch the redesigned life sciences education program during the pandemic.

It’s fitting that this gift came at the suggestion of Lori, whose relationship with the Garden has been invaluable to Lotusland over the past two decades. Lori is always there to share her love of the garden and support its needs. When she learned the new Junior Botanist program needed support during this year of reinventing, she was the first to advocate for Lotusland. Mark stepped up to propel the program forward, and encourages others to participate as part of his tribute to Lori in appreciation of her deep devotion to Lotusland.

Lori’s involvement has touched every corner of Lotusland, as a docent for both our adult and children’s tours, as a garden volunteer, as a hospitality helper during events, as a Lotus Society advocate, and as a plant lover and botany purveyor.

An integral part of Lotusland’s Fourth Grade Outreach program for 22 years, Lori says she “loves the fourth graders. We need to educate the next generation.” Lori’s warmth, enthusiasm, and plant expertise are appreciated and enjoyed by generations of Santa Barbara County students, and by their teachers and parents.
LOTUSLAND IN THE COMMUNITY
The Garden Gives Back

Lotusland is a nonprofit public charity, and as part of our work advancing appreciation and understanding of plants and the gardens, we are always looking for new and creative ways to engage and support the community. Here are a few things we’ve done to support and strengthen Santa Barbara during the pandemic.

Food insecurity in Santa Barbara is at an all-time high due to the rise of COVID-19 and the associated economic downturn. To help, Lotusland has started a fruit picking program for the Food Bank of Santa Barbara County. To date, we have gathered more than 500 pounds of fresh fruit to help those who are food insecure. We also opened our doors to heroes helping to address hunger problems in our county. As part of our Open Pathways program, Lotusland declared September Hunger Heroes Month and offered free tickets to staff and volunteers of local organizations that help address food insecurity.

Our Open Pathways program enabled us to host two more fantastic community outreach tour days. This summer, a Healthcare Heroes day was dedicated to those working on the front line of the medical COVID-19 response. We also showed support to the local black community by offering a free visit to the gardens for black business leaders in partnership with the founders of Pura Luna Apothecary who helped to organize the day.

The pandemic caused a major drop in blood donations. In June, Lotusland invited Vitalant, one of the nation’s oldest blood donation nonprofits, for a staff and volunteer blood drive. Twenty-two people donated to help strengthen our community and save a life.

2020 ANNUAL APPEAL LAUNCHES
Gifts for the Garden

Unusual times require unusual responses. At Lotusland we are thrilled to have the garden open for your use and enjoyment. We quickly adapted to safety measures by creating reimagined garden touring and educational experiences designed to offer tranquility to all who enter.

But, in order for our work to continue, we ask you to please consider supporting Lotusland’s efforts with a gift to the garden.

Today, restoration and healing are exactly what each of us needs. The garden provides respite and recovery during these unpredictable times.

Your contribution to Lotusland supports Ganna Walska’s cherished vision to educate, inspire and delight community visitors. While the experience has changed in pandemic times, Ganna Walska’s vision remains as alive as ever.

We are committed to creating a positive, nurturing experience to all who enter the garden, but we can’t do it alone. At this crucial moment, every gift, of any size, matters.

Please call Marily Lopez at 805.969.3767, ext. 105, go online to www.lotusland.org/giftsforthegarden, or email mlopez@lotusland.org to make your tax-deductible gift today. Thank you!
LOTUSLAND MEMBERSHIP GURU CHARTS A NEW COURSE
Bambi Leonard Retires

ROBERTA “BAMBI” LEONARD retired in September after developing and managing our highly successful Membership Program. Her nearly two decades of exceptional stewardship will continue to positively affect Lotusland long after she leaves her post this fall. Bambi’s warm personal nature and welcoming smile will be missed.

To honor Bambi’s service, Lotusland created a tribute book with personal accolades from staff, trustees, members, and volunteers. Some reflections on Bambi’s service and style include:

“I was always greeted by your smiling face”
“I would not be where I am in my career today, if it weren’t for you”
“Thanks for always demonstrating such good character”
“Your work ethic was admirable and an inspiration”
“I was always amazed by your super-powered memory bank of every member”
“Lotusland was so fortunate to have a person of your integrity and kindness for so long”
“Bambi never let us down”

Bambi’s Lotusland mantra is, “It’s all about the people.” She holds an encyclopedic knowledge of the people and personalities who have passed through our gates. Bambi has been fortunate enough to personally know nearly every trustee, from the “visionaries” like Carol Valentine, Robert Emmons, Arthur Gaudi and Michael Towbes to Larry Durham, Dan Bifano and our current President, Lesley Cunningham. She has known or worked with many Lotusland legends: Ozzie Da Ros, Frank Fujii, John LaFleur, Bill Paylen, Mike Iven, Terri Clay, Mike Furner and many more. Bambi says, “The Gardeners? — I wouldn’t have a job if it weren’t for their amazing work.” She is very connected to our dedicated volunteers, and is personal friends with many of them. Bambi likes to say, “They are the most special to me. The volunteers are the ones who bring us members and who help grow the program.”

Bambi has performed nearly every job in the office; answering the phones, making reservations, scheduling and managing our ever-evolving events. She helped produce 20 Lotusland Celebrates galas — making these epic extravaganzas flawless and legendary (including the ones with leopards, bears and elephants).

When asked how she grew and maintained the Membership Program, she shared a few pearls of her personal management wisdom; “Be good to your staff. Learn to break free of whatever is holding you back. Keep it positive.”

Perhaps Lotusland Trustee Dorothy Gardner puts it best, “Life at Lotusland will always be better because of you but never the same without you.”

OWN A PIECE OF LOTUSLAND HISTORY
Redwood and Monterey Cypress Wood for Sale

This is a rare opportunity to purchase pre-milled slabs from historic Lotusland trees. Beautifully grained slabs of the Monterey Cypress that dominated the Great Lawn until 2017 are available in varying sizes. Redwood slabs from a recently felled tree are also available. Cypress and Redwood are perfect choices for outdoor decks or benches, both being weather resistant and attractive. This wood embodies Lotusland’s history and beauty.

The Santa Barbara Bucket Brigade built several memorial benches out of this rarefied wood for each victim of the January 2018 Debris Flow. Lotusland wood benches are located around the community and form a network of lasting memorials to help family, friends, and community members heal. The Redwood is $10 per foot and the Monterey Cypress is $9 per foot. Please contact Tyler Diehl, 805.565.1310 for information on purchasing a piece of these iconic treasures.
LOTUSLAND CELEBRATES, our one-of-a-kind gala held each July since 1995, has delighted and inspired our guests as one of our community's most beloved summer gatherings. This year Lotusland Celebrates: Beyond the Pink Wall pivoted our in-person summer soiree into a virtual event program and online auction. With the creative event leadership, your generous donations and sponsorship, and plentiful auction donors, we have made history with Lotusland's very first virtual event!

The smashing success of the virtual event went ‘Beyond the Pink Wall’ with:

- 55% increase over projected net income
- 32 new first-time donors
- 64% reduction in event expenses
- 6x increase in auction items
- 50% improvement in income-to-expense ratio

Our pre-recorded event video was made available to our supporters on 07.25.20 and got a blast of star power with program host and Emmy Award winning actor, Finola Hughes, and an intimate musical performance in Lotusland’s legendary Cactus Garden by world-renowned artist Rufus Wainwright.

A huge thank you to all our sponsors, volunteers, entertainers, underwriters, supporters, and virtual ticket buyers. This year your support was more vital than ever!

WISH LIST
Help Advance Lotusland’s Mission

Cushman Hauler Pro for Grounds and Facilities
Hauler Pro for Grounds and Facilities staff at Lotusland. Many of the carts used by the garden and facilities staff are old and require regular repair. We hope to purchase a new and reliable cart for daily use in a myriad of projects to improve our efficiency on work throughout the gardens. $13,000

Repair and Paint our Iconic Pink Wall
Lotusland’s pink wall is in dire need of repair and painting. Santa Barbara architect George Washington Smith designed this distinctive Lotusland feature. Restoration of Lotusland’s exterior improves our neighborhood and visitor impression. Repairs total $80,000; gifts of any amount are deeply appreciated.

Cycad Assurance Nursery Area
Lotusland is building a secure growing area to protect our Earth’s most threatened cycads. This raised-bed, secure planting area will facilitate our continued propagation efforts for critically endangered cycads in collaboration with partner institutions across the globe. $100,000.

At this crucial moment, we are gratefully accepting donations of any size to support these projects.

To donate, please call 805.969.3767, ext. 104, or visit www.lotusland.org/support.

RARE PLANT AUCTION GOES ONLINE
Exceptional Plants 2020
Lotusland’s signature plant auction, Exceptional Plants, will be online for the first time! A small, choice selection of plants have been selected for this year’s virtual event. The auction will feature two different Encephalartos woodii hybrids as well as other special plants. After the auction, plants will be available for pick up here at Lotusland or local delivery may be arranged.

Bidding opens on Tuesday, October 6 at 10:00 AM and ends on Saturday, October 17 at 3:30 PM. Be sure to bid early – go to www.lotusland.org/plantauction.

WE NEED YOUR HELP!

Volunteer at Lotusland

Lotusland volunteers are the lifeblood of the Garden. More than 250 volunteers share their time and talents with Lotusland throughout the year. Garden Attendants welcome and support self-guiding visitors and serve as the friendly face of Lotusland. Volunteer interactions with visitors are socially distanced, and masks are required for visitors and volunteers. Garden Attendant shifts are three hours and no prior knowledge is needed. Join our valued volunteers and help the garden to grow! More information can be found at www.lotusland.org/support/volunteer or contact Kitty Thomassin, Volunteer Manager, by email at kthomassin@lotusland.org.
